ABSTRACT

This work published every 2 years is a directory of international and area studies librarians in Ohio. It is the first project of the Organization of International and Area Studies Librarians in Ohio (OIALO) organized in July 1996. This directory identifies 35 individuals with experience in collection development, reference service, and cataloging for international and area studies. It also identifies librarians with specialized or scholarly expertise in international areas and foreign languages, and foreign language ability. Each entry includes: name, title, institution, address, phone, fax, e-mail address, URL (uniform resource locator) or World Wide Web address, library responsibilities, specialized expertise, and education and degrees. The purpose of this directory is to: (1) aid librarians, teachers, students, researchers, university administrators, state officials, and the general public in identifying foreign area and language specialists in academic and research libraries throughout Ohio; (2) allow librarians in similar areas of international studies to identify and communicate with each other and to organize among themselves; and (3) support cooperative efforts among international and area studies librarians in Ohio. A subject index is included. (SWC)

INTRODUCTION

This work is a directory of international and area studies librarians in Ohio. It is the first project of the Organization of International and Area Studies Librarians in Ohio (OIALO, pronounced OI-ah-loh), organized in July, 1996 in Columbus, Ohio. The project arose as a resolution of the organizing meeting of OIALO. This project was given priority because of its importance in identifying colleagues, knowing about their experience and expertise, and gathering and organizing information on the means of communicating with them.

This directory identifies individuals with experience in collection development, reference service, and cataloging for international and area studies, and for foreign languages. It further identifies librarians with specialized or scholarly expertise in international areas and foreign languages.

Each entry gives:

- •Name
- •Title
- •Institution and address
- •Phone
- •Fax
- •E-mail
- •URL
- •Library responsibilities
- •Specialized expertise
- •Education and degrees (added later)

This directory includes a subject index. This index allows one to identify, by specific topic, librarians with responsibility and experience in international and area studies, and with foreign language ability. Moreover, it allows one to identify those with specialized or scholarly expertise.

There is a letter-based code that identifies each librarian in the directory. The code uses the first letters of the surname of each librarian. These codes indentify in the subject index those librarians with experience or expertise in relation to numerous subject areas.

This work has been compiled in order to:

- aid librarians, teachers, students, researchers, university administrators, state officials, and the general public in identifying foreign area and language specialists in academic and research libraries statewide.
- allow librarians in similar areas of international studies to identify and communicate with each other and to organize among themselves.
- support cooperative efforts among international and area studies librarians in Ohio.

Depending on the reception and usefulness of this directory, it is intended that it will be published every two years. It is also available in a regularly-updated, electronic format at:

http://aleph.lib.ohio-state.edu/~bcase/librarians.html

The editors apologize for any errors or omissions. Please send updates, additions, or corrections for this directory to them. In order to do so, you may use the form at the end of this publication (p. 18).

In this edition of the directory there are thirty-five entries. That so relatively small a group posseses such a global extent of regional and linguistic expertise is quite impressive. Giving group consciousness to the international and area studies librarians in Ohio thus transforms an impressive cadre into a more solidly effective one.
